When I arrive at LC Nature Park, my group will park in the parking lot. I might see the safari bus outside.

We will walk from the parking lot into the Mills Education Center to begin our visit.

Inside, I will see Bob the stuffed bison. He is big, but he is not alive. I can look at him and know that he will not move.

We will check in at the front desk so the staff knows we are here for the safari bus tour.

If we have time, I can touch the items on the Touch Table. These include bones, feathers, and furs from animals that live at the park.

My guide will meet me and tell me about the safari bus ride and what I can expect.

It is time to get on the safari bus. I will walk out to the bus and find a seat.

During the ride I will keep my hands, arms, and all body parts inside the bus. I will stay seated unless my guide says it's okay to stand.

The bus may go over bumps and near trees or tall plants. I may feel the wind and weather as the bus does not have glass windows.

I might see animals like bison and elk. These animals are big, but there is a fence, so I am safe. When we are near the animals, I will stay quiet so I don't scare them away.

When the ride is over, we will come back to the Mills Education Center.

I can explore anything I missed, like the Touch Table, the gift shop, the antler tower (look but don't touch), or the view of the enclosure.
